

JOINT WORKSHOP BY IMF FISCAL AFFAIRS
DEPARTMENT AND OFFICES IN EUROPE
THE FUNCTIONS AND IMPACT OF FISCAL COUNCILS

Paris, March 13, 2013

Sebastian Barnes
OECD
Council Member, Irish Fiscal Advisory Council

The views expressed are those of the presenter

Learning from limited experience

- Independent fiscal councils are widely advocated
- Experience is limited
- National approaches are diverse
- Irish Fiscal Advisory Council's (IFAC) experience is limited (18 months)
 - analytical work improves understanding of issues
 - operation confirms how council can help

Ex Ante case (1)

- Bias in forecasts
- Bias in setting of stance
- Councils can overcome by:
 - reducing information asymmetry
 - monitoring
 - making actions more observable
 - changing political incentives
- Sufficient condition = only councils can achieve

Ex Ante case (2)

- Quality of budget analysis
 - forecast accuracy
 - policy deliberation
- Strengthening public debate
 - informed analysis
- Councils can overcome by strong incentives under mandate to focus on these issues
 - technical expertise/capacity
 - transparency
 - dissemination

IFAC's mandate

- Assessment of:
 - macroeconomic forecasts
 - fiscal projections
 - compliance with Budgetary Rule and correction mechanism (subject to EU SGP)
 - overall fiscal stance
- No mandate to make forecasts
- Narrow remit on rules
- Very open mandate on “stance”

Ex post analysis of forecast record

Actual growth rate minus forecast growth rate

- No bias on average
- Large and persistent errors
 - Revisions are key part of the picture

Ex post analysis fiscal stance (1)

- Stance appears too loose during boom
 - Too little to tighten policy against the cycle
 - True position less favourable

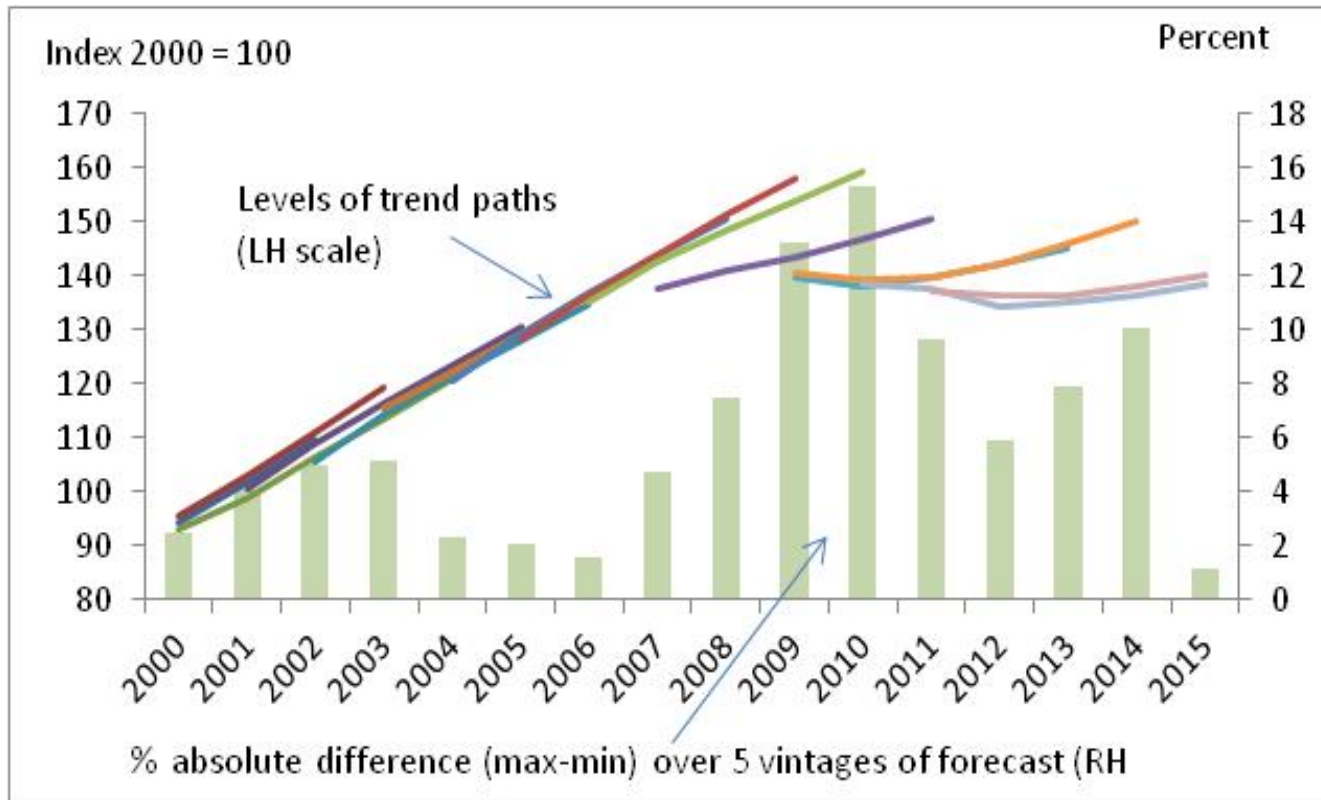

Ex post analysis fiscal stance (2)

- In real time, analysis did not signal
 - 2005 SPU had output 1.3% below potential
 - Small headline budget balance not unreasonable

Ex post analysis fiscal stance (3)

- Level and path of trend output misjudged
 - Cyclical/permanent split is critical

Forecast assessment

- Pre-IFAC assessments very limited
 - 1-year ahead, domestic comparisons, limited data
 - forecast errors not analysed systematically internally
- Difficult information problem to overcome
 - curse of dimensionality
 - limited data and transparency
 - difficult to communicate
- Need for local knowledge
 - forecasting GNP might be more useful?

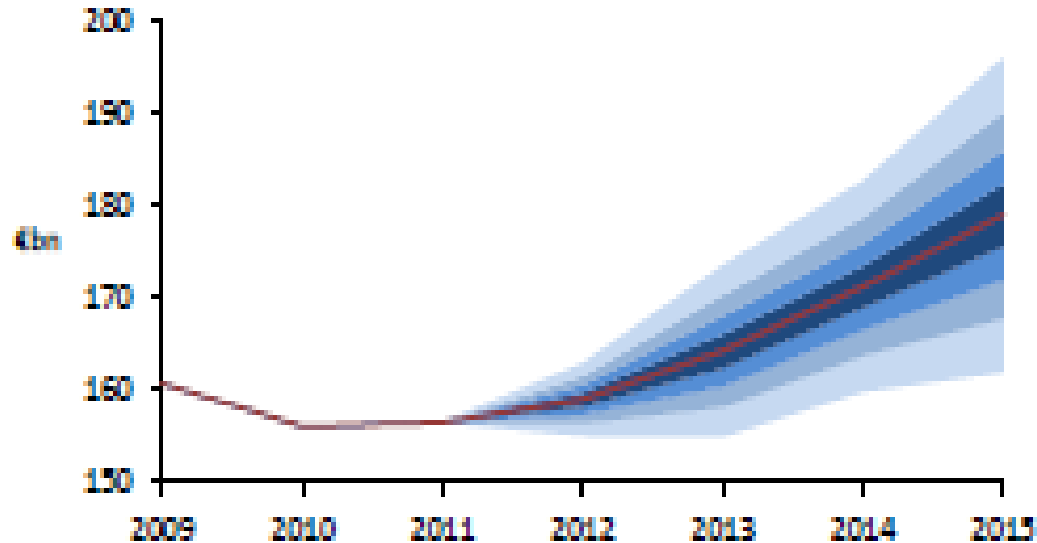

Open discussion of forecast errors

- Conflict of interest for forecasters
 - reluctant to discuss errors
- Herding tendency
 - all forecasts uncannily similar
 - outside forecasts no different
- Lack of analysis of errors limits learning
- IFAC not making forecasts is crucial
 - needs some tools

Open discussion of uncertainty

Source: SPU 2012 and IFAC calculations.

- Transparency around uncertainty
 - need to recognise errors/uncertainties
 - important for discussion of stance

Transparency

- Too little information published to assess
 - Annual data, selected components (volumes only)
 - No explanation of cyclical adjustments
 - Some tax bases not published
- More credibility than authorities
 - VAT forecasts were reasonable, but not believed

Fiscal stance

- IFAC policy line impossible to evaluate
 - Stance appropriate
 - Additional consolidation warranted
- Increasing response from government
- This message most prominent
 - little interest in forecasting work

How the council can close the gap

- Specialised capacity to address
 - 3 more analytical staff
 - Council – 5 members
 - Deliberative process
- IFAC gets public attention and viewed as credible
 - expert
 - independent
 - mandated (“government’s own watchdog”)
- This cannot be easily replicated by other bodies
 - attention to domestic factors

Conclusion

- Political bias problem not central
- Technical/transparency roles are key
- Council does meet a need
 - needs resources/credibility/legitimacy
- Hints for future direction of council
 - Examining forecast process
 - Focus on medium-term
 - Communication is difficult but critical
